Practice Wife Compelled To Follow By Husband

A Startling Story Told By
Woman In Police Court
On Wednesday

A charge of pandering, placed by his wife, Wednesday, against Herbert Robinson, who was apprehended Tuesday after making good an escape from the city lock-up Monday night, reveals a story of so inhuman proportions as to be scarcely credible, if her allegations be true.

According to her story, Robinson, on his return from the workhouse on May 1, where he had served out a sentence for petit larceny, said to her, "I've supported you, now you've got to support me." He then sent her out on the streets and remained at home to take care of his eighteen months' old child. This illicit practice, it is said, has been going on for a long time.

Tuesday afternoon, Chief of Police Parker waited outside the place where Robinson boards on Gay street and Robinson's wife came along. He stopped her and questioned her about the reports he had heard of her coercion into illicit life. Her admission carried with it the statement that she could not help herself—Robinson made her do it.

She was taken to police court and there made an affidavit against her husband, charging him with pandering. A warrant was issued for his arrest and he was shortly apprehended. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was committed to the county jail in default of a $500 bond. His hearing was set for Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

WE SOMETIMES WONDER

if people outside of banks, have any idea of the exactness with which our business must be handled.

For instance, every night when the bank force goes home, our books must be in balance and our "house in order" so that if a week later the Government says: "Give us a statement of your condition on last Tuesday," we must be able to do it in such perfect form that even the Government experts can find no flaw in it.

There is no other business in the world so held by law and custom to extreme safety and exactness.

And that is one of the reasons why this is the best place for your money.
